Improving Performance through the Gens & Associates Research Platform and Community

Maximizing Workforce Value

The regulatory function has been in the spotlight to increase value and efficiency as the life sciences community is under constant change. Given the COVID-19 pandemic, there is clear drive to quickly improve agility and resilience in regulatory and most other connected functions. The current regulatory environment is characterized by complex processes, systems, and regulatory requirements leading to operational inefficiencies and struggles to adapt to an efficient global operating model. There are also external forces to consider in the form of next-generation structured data submissions and expanding data standards requiring higher data quality levels in regulatory and other functional enterprise capabilities. To modernize Regulatory Information Management (RIM) capabilities, life sciences organizations and the providers that serve them must have the right tools, effective practices, skilled resources, and knowledge to make it happen.

Benchmark Data Access: The Information You Need, the Insights to Act

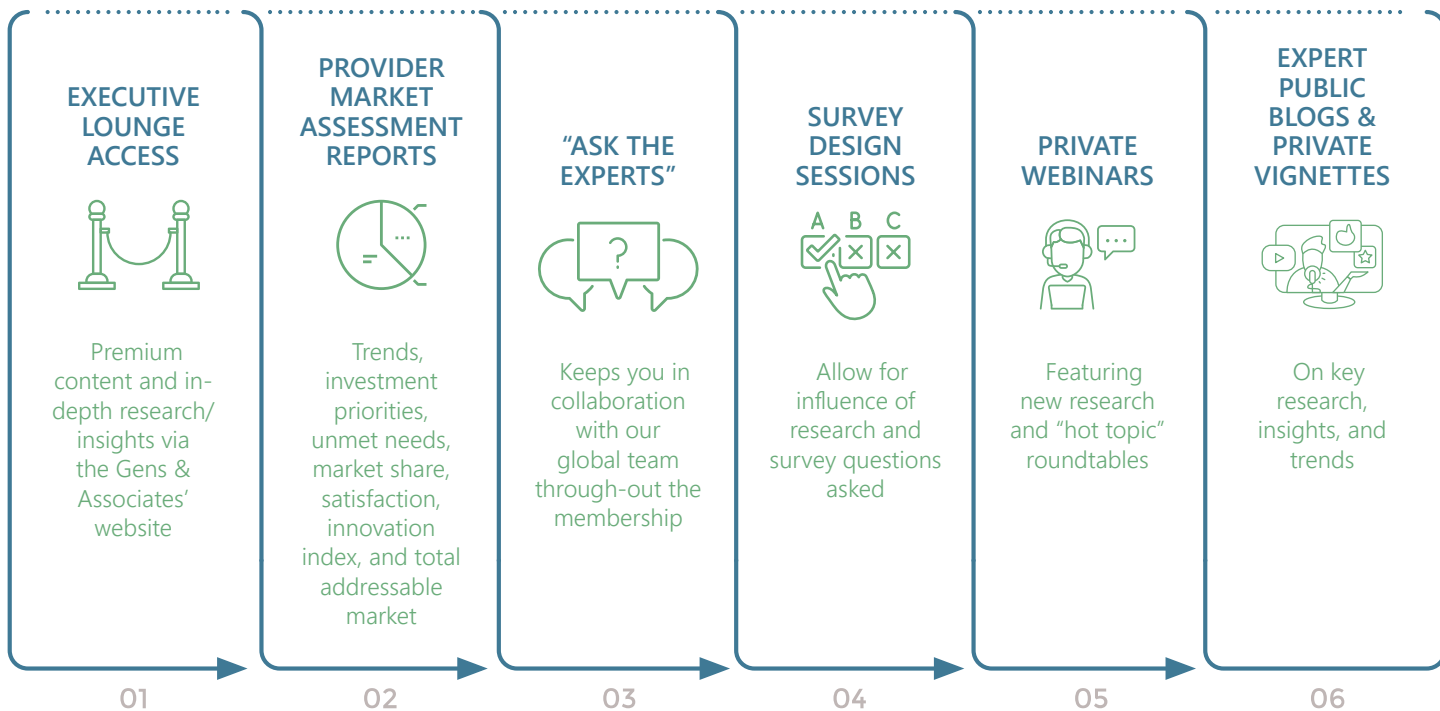

Our senior expert team is at the forefront of regulatory trends, delivering independent and trusted RIM Benchmark data along with relevant insights, perspectives, and actionable guidance. Our ultimate goal for those in our Benchmark community is getting you to the next level of regulatory and business performance by shortening the time to modernize your environment and adopt the right practices.

Executive Lounge Membership

For those looking to access our complete set of private in-depth research, market reports, and maturity models along with being connected to our global experts, we offer our Executive Lounge Membership for an annual fee.
